Reasons for Allowance

Claims 1-3, 5-9, 11-38 are allowed.

The prior art of record fails to teach a method that includes carrying out one or both of power control and frequency selection to configure one or more configuration parameters of the managed access point and maintaining an AP database that includes these configuration parameters. In addition, the prior art of record fails to disclose detection information that includes at least a further item of information wherein the information on the received beacon or probe response includes one or more configuration parameters.

Barber et al. (hereinafter Barber) and Whealen et al. (hereinafter Whealen) disclose a method comprising: a central management entity managing managed access points (APs) of a wireless network (Barber; paragraph 23, read as a command and control center (CCC) is generally associated with the wireless network, wherein the CCC manages and controls the access points associated with the wireless network), maintaining an AP database that includes information about managed APs and friendly APs of the wireless network, including for each managed AP in the AP database, the service set identifier of the managed AP (Barber; paragraphs 55, 71, 75, read as radio management can include a determination of the access point (AP) communicating with a device having a particular MAC address. The CCC can determine a great deal about the nature of the wireless network's space. The CCC can also analyze the radio ad MAC stats), sending a scan request to one or more managed APs of the wireless network, the scan request including a request for the receiving managed AP to scan for beacon and probe responses (Barber; page 76, read as the CCC sends a request for a scan over multiple channels, multiple frequency bands, or combination thereof, to the access point for listening and gathering radio stats), receiving reports from at least one of the receiving managed APs about beacons or probe responses from any potential rogue AP, including, for each potential rogue AP from which a beacon or probe response was received, detection information, and information on the beacon or probe response received sent by the potential rogue AP (Barber; paragraphs 75-77, read as the access point can send radio stats to the CCC along with the MAC stats and can analyze the stats and perform other tasks. One interesting result of a survey is that the CCC can detect “rogue” access points), wherein the detection information includes the service set identifier of the potential rogue AP, and wherein the information on the received beacon or probe response includes at least the service set identifier in the beacon or probe response (Barber; paragraphs 75-77); and for each beacon or probe response from a potential rogue AP on which information is received, ascertaining if the potential rogue AP is a managed AP, including: ascertaining if there is a match for the service set identifier of the potential rogue AP in the AP database (Whelan; paragraphs 44-45, read as the collected AP list is compared with the registered AP list to extract those APs in the collected AP lists which are not registered in the registered AP list where an SSID is an ID number identifying equipment with which the client is to communicate are added to the AP list in the AP list storage section)

Therefore, claims 1-3, 5-9, 11-38 are allowed.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled “Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance.”
